IABS BUSINESS PARTNERS RECOMMENDATIONS

Claire McGing

To mark International Women's Day 2022 and support our Athena SWAN self-assessment process, Dr Eburn Joseph gave an introductory workshop on intersectionality to staff and students at the Institute of Art, Design + Technology (IADT), Dún Laoghaire. We sought to take the first steps to raise awareness and develop intersectionality practices in the college. The session provided an informative overview of the intersection of race and gender and how it is reflected in everyday lives and conflicts in society. At times, the discussion was uncomfortable but absolutely necessary for the education of a campus community that is majority white. The pacing was excellent. Dr Joseph's seamless transitions between conceptual discussion and examples of the urgency of intersectionality in the higher education sector and beyond were something to strive for. __ _

I am very happy to recommend your training as someone who participated in the online training in 2020 and again as part of the museum wide training at the Irish Museum of Modern Art. Dr Eburn Joseph and her colleagues were informed and passionate in the delivery of the key learning modules and empowered me as a student to develop a greater understanding of the current issues regarding Anti Racism and an introduction to Black Studies.

The Institute of Antiracism and Black Studies are asking some of the most important questions in Ireland today. They do so with a deep academic, professional and personal grounding which allows participants to explore these questions in such a way that will leave your organisation changed for the better. I wholeheartedly endorse their work and would encourage others to join them in their journey.

IABS is amazing. I just completed an antiracism training and I am so impressed. I have learnt so much that has impacted on my work. This workshop challenged my thinking and equipped me with the skills to put what I learned about counterstorying telling into practice.

Thank you to Dr. Ebum Joseph for providing me with so many insights into the Antiracism Practice. This course has provided such a solid background for me to engage in antiracist conversations at work and in my personal life, and has taught me so much about my own background and about white fragility. I have found it very valuable to partake and would love to join again for a more in-depth learning experience on some of the topics discussed.-

Dr Ebum Joseph delivered thought-provoking and challenging material with kindness, warmth and humour. I left feeling greatly encouraged to do better, both as a person and in my organisation. I highly recommend this anti racist training for anyone who desires to grasp the tools for true equity and equality.

The forum for discussing and understanding events happening around the world that carried racism motives but might seem hard to understand from a white perspective was really helpful.

"Allow for questions to explore conflict of opinion. Time given to express an opinion and allow for feed back and collaborative discourse.

Great to have the opportunity to avail of this training and have recommended it to my colleagues.

"The anti-racism training is immensely informative and should be accessible to all ages. There is a huge need in Ireland today for everyone to understand what racism really means and how it impacts daily on our society.

"Excellent excellent training! Every individual in the country could benefit from this.

I participated in Antiracism training with ACET, with Dr. Ebum Joseph. Dr. Joseph was thoroughly engaging, and has a wonderful non-judgemental presence as a teacher, which facilitated deep group discussion, reflection, and understanding. I found that this training really helped me to see my own biases as well as understand structural/institutional bias. I now feel more confident about making positive changes within the organisations I am involved in, and feel more equipped to address any issue of racism when I see it happen.
